Fiji Immersion Family Adventure

Vorovoro and BTG invite your family to join our inclusive community where we live and learn from one another through cultural immersion, cultural exchange, skill sharing, and living island life on "island time" - where each day unveils limitless opportunities for growth and learning through connections, exploration, adventure and shared experiences. Bring your open mind, open heart, and a desire to understand more deeply than you ever have before how connected we all really are.

On a pristine 200 acre island in remote Fiji, Bridge the Gap (BTG) and the chiefly family of Vorovoro Island partner to facilitate life-changing cultural immersion experiences. Our customized programs are designed to support local community development goals, while preserving and celebrating native Fijian identity, culture and environment.

BTG works hand in hand with the local Fijian community to identify and collaboratively address goals relating to education, health, income, environment and cultural preservation in ways that strengthen and empower the local community.

Live and learn. Connect and collaborate.

On Vorovoro Island, we live and learn from one another through cultural immersion, cross-cultural exchange, and living island life on "island time" - where each day unveils limitless opportunities for growth and learning through connections, exploration, adventure and shared experiences. Bring your open mind, open heart, and a desire to understand more deeply than you ever have before how connected we all really are. Tui Mali, the tribal chief of Vorovoro, says it best: "On Vorovoro, there is no line in the sand that separates visitors and natives. We are one. On Vorovoro, $1 + 1 = 1$."

On Vorovoro, you are considered an extension of the local tribal community and are welcomed to participate in truly authentic and beneficial ways. As such, we are invited to take part in aspects of Fijian life that are not typically made available to visitors to Fiji.

Through daily island life, you will come to understand more thoroughly the challenges that remote indigenous island communities face daily as a result of the world's rapidly changing climate. See and experience these challenges first hand, and participate in discussions about how each of us can live lives that support communities living in the most vulnerable regions of the world.

On Vorovoro, we embrace the Fijian philosophy of life to work hard, love harder, and to never stop laughing together. Each day brings new opportunities to explore concepts of joy, beauty, connection and simplicity in ways you've never had before.

The Vorovoro Island Family

Everything we do is truly a partnership and a collaboration. Let us introduce you to a few of the key people behind the Vorovoro experience.

Tui Mali
Chief of Mali and Vorovoro Islands

Tui Mali is the chief of Vorovoro and Mali Islands, which consist of 5 villages. He spent his life working on a ship, laying fiber optic cables that would eventually connect the world. When he retired, he assumed his role as Chief and returned to Vorovoro. His international travels have informed his decision to support and lead his tribe by focusing on creating sustainable sources of income for the Mali people, while honoring and preserving the integrity of their Fijian identity and native environment.

Wati Miriama
Operations Director

Wati is the niece of Tui Mali, and the Fijian counterpart of BTG director, Jenny. Like countless generations before her, she was born and raised on Vorovoro. Wati is involved in all aspects of managing and hosting groups on the island, and enjoys working with Jenny to develop experiential cross cultural programming that allows guests to see and experience Fiji in authentic ways that few ever have the opportunity to do. Wati is also the busy and proud mother to four children.

Nemani Baleneiyaca
Cultural Manager and Team Leader

Nemani has been helping to host groups on Vorovoro since 2007. His commitment to his Fijian heritage combined with his natural inclination to work hard, continue to learn, and be a team player has aided his growth into the dynamic leader he is today. He mentors new Fijian team members and also develops and facilitates cultural programming for visitors. When not on Vorovoro, you will find Nemani hard at work at his biggest passion: furthering the success of his family's sugarcane farm.

Semisi Verenaivalu
Head Chef and Music/Dance Teacher

Semisi is from Nakawaqa village in Mali Island. As head chef on Vorovoro, he is the creator of all things delicious on the island and he loves to share and learn new recipes using fresh, local ingredients. Semisi teaches cooking classes as well as island dance classes and singing classes on Vorovoro. Back in his village, he leads and directs the Mali Island Church choir and also has a small business selling food staples and dry goods to his neighbors from his home.

What is a day on Vorovoro like?

Each day begins with countless opportunities to learn, grow, and connect. We start the day with breakfast at 7:30 am, followed by a community meeting at 8:30 am. At the community meeting, the plans and itinerary of the day will be shared and general announcements will be made. Families can also sign up for daily duties and activities. After the morning meeting, each family can join with BTG and Fiji team members to complete their daily duties and other various duties that may require attention and are vital to keeping our village running smoothly. Examples of daily duties are food prep, planting and harvesting vegetables, taking care of chickens and ducks, harvesting and scraping coconuts, building projects, collecting firewood, village clean up, and more depending on what needs to happen that day.

There will be program options such as classes, workshops, tours, excursions, etc available most mornings and afternoons. In addition, participants can assist our Fijian team with ongoing building and village maintenance projects, which will be determined based on need and supply availability. During downtime, parents and children alike can help out in the kitchen, swim, snorkel, explore, make friends, play games, go fishing, help with community projects, chill in the treehouse, or simply relax with a book in a hammock and enjoy the sea breezes and the breathtaking island scenery. Truly, the possibilities are endless.

Our classes and workshops are great for children and adults to attend and learn together. But we know that sometimes, children need their own space to move and explore and Vorovoro is the perfect place for that - there is so much to do and learn through experience. The nature of our program is rooted in community and collaboration, everyone has so much to offer! So each family have chances to work with us to take turns planning and implementing programs and activities for the kiddos,

We eat often and can usually accommodate most diets. Following breakfast, we have morning tea at 10:30 am. Morning tea consists of light snacks and coffee/tea. We come together to eat lunch at 12:30 pm, and then we enjoy quiet time/rest time from 1 pm - 3 pm. At 3:00 pm, we have afternoon tea - more snacks and coffee/tea - before moving into afternoon activities. We come together one more time to eat dinner at 6:30 pm.

In the evening, families can choose to join in the nightly kava drinking session with chief Tui Mali and the Fiji team, or enjoy other evening activities like star gazing, campfires, games, talent shows, and more. Drinking kava together is a large part of Fijian culture, and there will be many opportunities during your stay on Vorovoro to participate. We encourage you join in often, even if you choose not to drink the kava! On the kava mat (or grog mat) is a magical place of sharing music, stories, and laughter - it's one of the best ways you can learn, connect, and immerse yourself with the local people and culture.

Accommodation

Vorovoro accommodation is simple, comfortable, and functional. Group and private accommodation is available in open-air beach houses that make the most of island breezes and ocean lullabyes.
